- Emma Moffatt

Earlier this year, my neighbour approached me to ask about the health supplements I was using as they had noticed I was always out and about, whether it was running, cycling or heading off to the pool. It was then that I realised I was only occasionally taking an off-the-shelf multivitamin. Having explained this to them, they invited me to try some of the products Neways has to offer. Right from the beginning, I was impressed with the product presentation and the manner in which the company was run.

To me, being a triathlete offers the ultimate lifestyle. Most days consist of training, eating and sleeping, repeated three times. And to add to that, triathlon has enabled me to travel the world to places I would never have imagined possible. As my body is constantly being pushed to the limit, it is important that I look after it and remain healthy so I can continue doing what I love.

In the beginning, I tried Ming Gold, Orachel, Revenol as well as the Endau Harmonising cream. While using these products I noticed an improvement in the quality of my training and higher levels of energy and wellbeing in between sessions.

As a result of being so pleased with the outcome from using these products, I was intrigued and interested in trying more of the other products Neways has to offer. I am now also regularly taking EFA Recovery Plus, Mass Advantage protein shake and using the Alleviate cream.

Combining the use of all these products is giving me energy to perform better in training and racing. It is also providing me with essential daily vitamins and minerals to maintain my health and wellbeing. I believe these are vital factors for helping me to become a successful athlete.

Since I started using Neways, I have won my first ITU World Cup in Edmonton, Canada as well as being chosen as a member of the Australian team to compete in the ITU World Triathlon Championships in Hamburg, Germany this year. Hopefully, through combining hard training and added nutritional supplementation from Neways, I will have a long and successful triathlon career!

Thanks Neways!

Congratulations - Adam Pine

Congratulations to Adam Pine! After many years as an elite athlete in swimming, Adam has demonstrated that persistence and hard work pay off, having just won the Gold Medal in the 50m Butterfly at the World Short-Course Championships in Manchester, England.

We are delighted that Adam continues to use Neways products and on behalf of the entire Neways Corporate Team and Distributors, we want to say congratulations on a fantastic result.
